Judging

Judging will take place in two parts – offline and online. The full number of prizes may not be awarded if the offline panel of judges determine that submissions do not meet the quality level to receive the award. All decisions are final.

Step 1. Offline

A panel of judges will score the submissions in five categories. The highest scoring 10 submissions will proceed to the next round. In event of a tie, a decision will be made at the discretion of the judges. All decisions made by the judges are final and scoring is confidential. Submissions will be judged on:

- Creativity and artistic expression
- Depth of research
- Appropriate depiction of research (image, graph, chart, etc.)
- Delivery of content to viewers
- Overall quality and professionalism (no grammar mistakes for any text, incorrect representation of facts, etc.)

Step 2. Online
Top 10 submissions will be posted online on Sunhak Peace Prize Foundation's social media channel. The number of views and number of likes during a set period of time will be combined to come up with an online score.

Final Selection
The offline score and online score will be combined for a total score. Based on the total score, one grand prize, two semi-finalists, three most popular, and 4 honorable mention entries will be determined. In event of a tie, a decision will be made at the discretion of the judges.

Reasons for Disqualification
Your submission may not be considered for the Competition if it does not satisfy all submission requirements and the terms and conditions laid out. If the content is determined to be unrelated to the theme, it may be disqualified.
